What Is A Neighborhood Council?

In 1999 voters in the City of Los Angeles set up a network of neighborhood councils to act as a conduit between the City and local communities. Neighborhood Councils are designed to give community members a forum for addressing issues in their neighborhoods. They listen to the community, hear diverse opinions and make recommendations to the city on our community needs and interests. Each neighborhood council has a budget of $50,000 a year to spend on these community needs as identified by its stakeholders.

Who Can Participate ?

Any stakeholder may vote in the election and/or run for any position on the Board of Directors for which they qualify. A stakeholder is any person who: lives/ works/owns property or participates in youth groups, senior groups, community-based organizations, faith-based institutions or schools within our boundaries or declares a factual basis for his/her stakeholder status.
